Legal or Illegal

Submitted by cabdubaki on Fri, 01/15/2010 - 02:20.

Where is prostitution legal, illegal or limitedly legal? Well thanks to the help of Prostitution Procon.org we can know that information.

Legal prostitution:

- Argentina
- Bolivia
- Canada
- Denmark
- Ethipoia
- Germany
- Hungary
- Ireland
- Kyrgyzstan
- Lativa

Illegal Prostitution:

- Afghanistan
- Bahamas
- China
- Dominica
- Egypt
- Grenada
- Haiti
- India
- Jamaica
- Korea North
- Liberia

Limitedly Legal:

- Austraila
- Bangladesh
- Iceland
- Japan
- Malyasia
- Norway

Many more of these countries can be found at Prostitution Procon.org.

Though all of these countries fit into different categories when legalizing illegalizing and having a limited legalizing about more than half of them of the countries do not allow brothel owning or pimping.

Though prostitution is illegal in these countries they seem to have an extremely huge problem dealing with the fact that it going on. Prostitution brothels, trafficking, and sex toursim all seem to add on to the rates increasing.

There are still plenty of debates going on now about wether countries should legalizing prostitution an article has been written about the opinions of Professor Janice Raymond and Dr. Melissa Ditmore, both who are working hard to make prostitution business a safer place for everyone including the women who are working the businesss. They both handle the situation from different aspects and are using different methods to help this issue.

Professor Janice Raymond is not infatuated with the idea of legalizing prostiution this quote helps summarize her opinion on the subject.

"There is no evidence that legalization of prostitution makes things better for women in prostitution. It certainly makes things better for governments who legalize prostitution and of course, for the sex industry, both of whom enjoy increased revenues." (Keane)

Dr. Melissa Ditmore agrees with the idea that prostitution should be decriminalized.

"Prostitution should be decriminalized. This would remove prostitution from the criminal code and thereby render prostitution akin to other businesses. It'd be taxed and subject to business requirements." (Keane)
