Instead of doing the traditional portfolios we will be doing team debates. However, in conjunction with the debates you will be writing individual papers which will be referred to as "portfolios".

For the debates the class will be split up into four groups in order to argue two topics. The groups will decide who performs what task, depending upon how many people are in each group. Within each group there will be three speakers and support staff. If you are a speaker in Debate 1 then you will be support staff for Debate 2, and if you are support staff for Debate 1 then you will be a speaker for Debate 2. The audience for each debate will have a hand in grading the groups debating. The rubric the audience will use during the first debate will not be as complicated as the rubric for the second debate.

The assignments for Debate 1 will be handed out fairly soon, during the second or third week of school. In addition to the inclass portion of the debates each student is responsible for turning in their notes on the day of the debate, and a Reflective Overview either the Thursday or Tuesday after the debate.
