

Wall Street's Favorite Drugs

Courtney Comstock | May 10, 2011, 12:32 PM | 57,967 | 14

Here's one sign Wall Street won't get crushed by the recent regulation attacks.

The people on Wall Street are getting stronger, physically and mentally. From an informal survey of sources, we've learned that there's a bit of a health craze happening on Wall Street.

People are cleansing with juices and spending more hours at the gym to get in fighting shape.

Of course, vices call. But the drugs that Wall Streeters do use regularly are often performance-enhancing drugs. Rather than brain-eating drugs like heroin and ecstasy, Wall Street turns to drugs that will make them operate at 150%.

Out of our list of the 11 most popular drugs on Wall Street, there are only 3 drugs that are considered "depressants," (we included marijuana in that, although technically, it's a stimulant). Most of them purport to make you sharper, smarter, and in some cases, better looking (at least in your own opinion).

Lorazepam or Xanax

Type of drug: 3-hydroxy benzodiazepine

Prescribed for: Anxiety (short term)

Wall Street use: To calm, to counter-act and come down from uppers taken during the day, for courage

Effects: Lorazepam dissolves on your tongue and delivers a fast calm-down effect, kind of like a shot of alcohol without the loss of judgment and coordination.

When to take: Before a big meeting, or after a long day instead of alcohol. It would also work well before you appear in your after you get caught insider trading.

Lorazepam

Lexapro or Zoloft

Cocaine

Type of drug: Serotonin–norepinephrine–dopamine reuptake inhibitor

Prescribed for: It is not prescribed. It is illegal.

Wall Street use: To improve a night out.

Effects: Like Adderall, it affects the mesolimbic reward pathway. It increases alertness, feelings of well-being and euphoria, energy and motor activity, feelings of competence and sexuality.

When to take: At night on the weekends, but only when you have absolutely no chance of getting caught with it.

Caffeine

Type of drug: Psychoactive stimulant

Prescribed for: Apnea in premature newborns

Wall Street use: Daily stimulant, appetite suppressant, work aid

Effects: Temporarily wards off drowsiness, restores alertness, stimulates awareness, and elevates your mood.

When to take: In the morning, at lunch, after dinner ... Whenever!

Source: Medline

Alcohol

Type of drug: Psychoactive

Prescribed for: Maybe in Ireland.

Wall Street use: Intoxication, courage.

Effects: The body metabolizes alcohol as an energy-providing nutrient. It then has depressive effects on the central nervous system including relaxation, impaired sensory and motor function, slowed cognition, and stupefaction. In the morning, dehydration. After years of use, liver and brain damage.

When to take: At night, on celebratory occasions.

Viagra

Type of drug: cGMP-specific phosphodiesterase type 5 inhibitor

Prescribed for: Erectile dysfunction

Wall Street use: For erectile dysfunction, to improve sexual performance, to get it up after an Adderall-filled day or cocaine-filled night, to counteract the side effects of hair-loss drugs.

Effects: Ability to sustain a satisfactory erection, improved sexual performance, increased libido.

When to take: Before sex.

I was getting bored until I saw Cocaine. Back in the late 70's & early 80's it was THE drug of choice. Then in the 90's I saw those people again, looking like mall rats. ya gotta know when enough is enough.

Ha, I've finally formed a message for that movie, maybe, condemning the use of drugs to get ahead, specifically targeted toward wall street? Ha ha, finally. Because, otherwise, that movie had no meaning.

These drugs, wow. They symbolize what happens everywhere, with college students cheating and taking ADHD pills... It is strange though how you can manipulate the mind into performing exactly how you want it to. Now if only we could get rid of the side effects...

But there will always be side effects. Unless, unless there are none, so whatever it is gets mass produced, so everyone has it, so you're not really "ahead", like maybe, say, a multivitamin?
