The Montana Medical Growers Association is holding a public information meeting on Saturday in Great Falls to shine a more positive light on medical cannabis.

The event comes just days after a state-wide raid on several medical marijuana businesses.

The forum will feature medical marijuana patient and national speaker Irvin Rosenfeld who will discuss his use of cannabis to treat a bone disorder.

Rosenfeld is one of only several people who receive medical marijuana through a federal government program.

Organizers are hoping the event will start a good dialogue between supporters and opponents of medical marijuana.

Rosenfeld said, "I want people to come out and listen from Great Falls, all ages, good and bad - meaning people that are in favor of medical cannabis and people that are against it - to express their wills and express their desires. We have plenty of time, we want to hear from all of them."

The event starts at 1 pm at the 406 Club on the east end of town. No medicinal cannabis will be allowed on the premises.

It will double as a fundraiser for the Montana Medical Growers Association.

Rosenfeld was diagnosed at age ten with multiple congenital cartilagenous exostosis. He is currently the vice-president of Newbridge Securities in Florida.
