Indian dairy sector set for overhaul; to move from processors to producers

July 8 2014

The Economic Times - India has the maximum number of cows and buffalos in dairy production: about 300 million. It is also the global leader in milk production: about 135 million tonnes a year. Neither figure impresses Trevor Tomkins of the US-based Venture Dairy,...

Policy watch: The reshaping of north India – the Amul way

July 7 2014

India - Within the next two years Amul will expand to two more major states – Uttar Pradesh (UP) and Punjab. That will further enlarge the market footprint of Amul and Sagar brands, both of which are owned by 3.3 million milk producers of Gujarat. ...

Asia Dairy Network Website News from John Moran, ADN Coordinator - July 2014

This newsletter will deal specifically with the second category, that is the weaned heifers up to the point of calving. Like the milk fed calves, these are the future of the dairy herd, being the stock with the highest genetic quality, so should be managed to minimise the stresses of early life so they can graduate to productive ruminants as soon as possible and con-tinue growing.

Asia Dairy Network Website News from John Moran, ADN Coordinator - May 2014

Welcome to the fourth edition (May 2014) of the ADN News.

Every dairy farm, whether it has 5, 10 or 50 milking cows is made up of various categories of stock, with each category requiring different management strategies. I want to spend the next couple of ADN Website News to concentrate our thinking towards looking after the different categories of stock in the dairy herd.

Asia Dairy Network Website News from John Moran, ADN Coordinator - April 2014

Welcome to the third edition (April 2014) of the ADN News.

I want to devote this Newsletter to describing one of the simplest measurements you can make on any farm, yet one of the most important ones that will reveal much about the farm's feeding and herd management. That is the percentage of milking adult cows (and first lactation heifers) in the herd. This is one of the Key Performance Indicators (or KPI for short) of herd management.
